Vent-A-Hood Celebrates 75th Anniversary

RICHARDSON, Texas – Vent-A-Hood, the company that created the modern residential range hood, is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

“Being the first to create or define an industry is a significant achievement,” said Blake Woodall, director of sales for Vent-A-Hood. “But a much greater milestone is being at the very top of your game 75 years later.”

When the company opened in 1933, the indoor range hood was a novel idea. Employees sold products door-to-door and returned to the manufacturing plant where each order was then made by hand. The Vent-A-Hood name was then trademarked in 1937, and a loyal customer base soon expanded across the nation.

Today, Vent-A-Hood is a third-generation family-owned business that remains a celebrated leader among range hood manufacturers. The company carries on its role as a pioneer, maintaining an automated plant that produces high-end luxury range hoods in volume as well as a custom division that creates hoods from the best artisans. And in a market where an estimated 3.5 million range hoods are produced each year, many people still refer to any range hood as a ‘vent hood’ or ‘ventahood.’

“I credit fine craftsmanship, leading engineering and design, and the strength of our proprietary technology with Vent-A-Hood’s signature Magic Lung® blower for keeping our company and the Vent-A-Hood name at the forefront of our business,” Woodall said.
